

Christine Robinson
President
Philanthropy Network Greater Philadelphia

Christine Robinson is a seasoned national and international thought leader with expertise in nonprofit and public sector systems, generative networks, and building pathways to equitable outcomes. She has crafted policy and system change for justice.

Robinson is a recognized strategist in equity, vision articulation, and program development and design. She brings extensive experience in program evaluation, forming collaborative projects, and launching local, statewide, regional, and national initiatives on social justice issues.

Robinson has worked as an executive coach, consultant, facilitator, strategist, and network weaver across the U.S., focused on nurturing a culture of well-being. She worked closely with staff across Los Angeles County, the largest county in the US, to develop an equity framework across more than 38 municipal offices.

Robinson has utilized her expertise throughout her career to make significant strides in many initiatives across numerous sectors. For example, she served as a consultant to the Obama Administration's White House Initiative on Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders, which involved crafting a municipal strategy. She also advised the H.W. Bush Administration Dept. of Treasury on economic security models for youth. Her focus areas included financial security and asset strategies, health and education disparities, human development, two-generation strategies, policy alignment, equity and inclusion, and place-based endeavors.
